FLOORING

Replace your stained carpet and dated linoleum with vinyl planks, engineered wood, real hardwood and tile! Many new vinyl products have a very convincing look of wood at a fraction of the cost of real hardwood installation, and require little or no maintenance over their lifetime. Engineered wood flooring can come at lower cost than hardwood while offering the “real wood” look. This flooring offers a more durable surface than vinyl planks, with little to no maintenance. While engineered flooring is extremely hard-wearing, it does have limitations and a badly damaged piece or section often requires replacement, whereas real wood can be refinished many times. Hardwood flooring is the ultimate sign of build quality, a properly maintained hardwood floor will last for generations, presumably many lifetimes even over quality engineered flooring. Tile flooring can give a regal impression. Unpleasant cold tile doesn't need to be a concern anymore; new systems easily allow heated flooring installation under tile for adjustable comfort. From large travertine to detailed mosaic designs or any combination- allow tile to become an expression of design and durability in flooring options.
